A PRACTICAL LEGAL STATEMENT FROM THE LEGAL ACTION GROUP ON FURTHERING THE INTERESTS OF DISABLED CHILDREN Von Phillip Taylor MBE A PRACTICAL LEGAL STATEMENT FROM THE LEGAL ACTION GROUP ON FURTHERING THE INTERESTS OF DISABLED CHILDREN An appreciation by Phillip Taylor MBE and Elizabeth Taylor of Richmond Green Chambers This new second edition from the Legal Action Group on welfare law is very much welcomed for the substantial effort which has been put in by the authors, Steve Broach, Luke Clements and Janet Read, to update this important work. They explain in succinct and practical

ways the legal rights of some of the most disadvantaged and vulnerable people in our society, namely disabled children. The legal principles in relation to this important group of people are highly complex and frequently misunderstood by organisations and specialists who have duties and responsibilities towards them. Many families are often frustrated because they lack essential information about legal matters which substantially affect their lives and about the ways the law might be used to assist them and this is where LAG steps in as the provider of very well explained material. The highly experienced authors have expertly set out the many, often overlapping, sources of law, explaining the differences between what public bodies must do to support disabled children and that which they may do which will be of great assistance to parents. The second edition provides detailed coverage of the changes in the law on special educational needs and disability (SEND) included in Part 3 of the Children and Families Act 2014 and the SEND Code of Practice, including education, health and care (EHC) plans. Other important areas covered are the Working Together to Safeguard Children guidance (2015) and local authority social care duties to disabled children. It also discusses the changes to the National Health Service introduced by the Health and Social Care Act 2012 impact on disabled children. There is detailed information for those seeking advice on how to obtain suitable housing for disabled children and their families under the Housing Act 1996, plus a welcome new chapter on decision-making and mental capacity and revised information on transition to adulthood and on the provision of services for young people under 25. A new chapter on legal remedies through tribunals, judicial review, ombudsmen and complaints procedures is also included to assist access to justice. We consider that this book is essential and fundamental reading for those working with disabled children and their families in charitable, independent or statutory sectors. It is highly relevant to advisers, advocates, lawyers, social and health care professionals and for academic study and a must for your legal library. Above all, this book is written for families with disabled children and disabled children and young people themselves to provide information about legal matters which substantially affect their lives and about the ways the law might be used to assist them. Thank you LAG. The law is as stated as at 1st November 2015.

Pressestimmen 'The book appeals because it looks at its subject matter holistically, considering not only the legal framework relating to disabled children, but the broader social context drawing on real life expertise of disabled children and their families and research that highlights the common problems they experience. As a result, the book has focus, concentrating not on abstract considerations, but on relevant and essential information on how the law can assist disabled children and their families.'
